To Mr Andrew Smith.
Chief Planner, NCA

I'm writing to address the discussion of allowing Seaplanes to utilise West Lake to conduct landings.

I've read through the submission and most of the online chat about it. I can't see it not being a hazard with the majority of water use being in where is indicated to be the main landing area.

Expecting this to be a shared area without some potential for conflict is a bit much.

The operators continuously go on about how good they are and how they operate in Rose Bay with lots of water traffic.

All their arguments tend to suggest that they would also have no issues operating only from the Central Basin, which has significantly less use than West Lake.

If they used Central Basin, I have no real problem, but I don't support the use of West Lake at all.

Andy MacDonald.
